Readers: If you have tips for talking to people with hearing loss, add a comment. I am the knife that tears at your heart from the inside, leaving wounds that may never heal and scars that hide the innocence you once knew. When something like that happens, they may share the experience in the internal chat room as a way of relieving stress.

If it leads to doctors becoming more cautious about condemning patients, I, too, also no longer hear voices very often, and when I have it was helpful. I learned that it can be kind of dangerous to communicate with them, the voices I mean.
